Letter from The Executive Director

North Broad Street serves as a main thoroughfare for Philadelphia. From City Hall to Germantown Avenue, North Broad helps connects more than 112,000 SEPTA riders, 48,000 residents and 30,000 drivers to communities, culture and commerce. While the corridor is experiencing revitalization that’s increasingly moving north, the median household income remains stable, at around $15,000 a year. As a result, the North Broad Renaissance (NBR) realized that it has an obligation to use North Broad’s revitalization as an opportunity to improve the narrative around poverty, inclusion and collaboration.

This year the organization looked at our programs to ensure that we are doing just that, and being intentional about hiring from the community, increasing pay to be more aligned with the city’s minimum wage, and building partnerships that could help us create sustainable and impactful growth.

These efforts will advance with the creation of the North Broad Business Improvement District. Our goal is to work with property owners to continue positioning North Broad for strategic growth that not only benefits the investors, but the entire community. To date, the feedback has been positive as property owners can see the impact Business Improvement Districts are having across the country.

In addition, the NBR became key partners with the Neighborhood Growth Project, which works to create broader based prosperity along North Broad. As a member of the Council Connector program, I’m eager to work with our elected officials on policy that supports pillars like inclusive growth and good jobs, and healthier and safer neighborhoods.

Also, thanks to the MET Philly, a growing restaurant scene, and two new proposed hotels, North Broad is increasingly becoming an entertainment destination. In partnership with Visit Philly, a key goal is to help broaden North Broad’s visibility in the hospitality and tourism industry.

Last, but certainly not least, placemaking and improving green space along the corridor will continue to be a primary objective. We’re excited to have partnered with The William Penn Foundation to explore creative space along North Broad. The timing is ideal, and we have an opportunity to leverage our research and funding partner with other key organizations, including the Philadelphia Department of Commerce and the Office of Transportation and Infrastructure Services, to ensure that these creative spaces service the needs of the community along North Broad Street.

As we work on our next five year strategic plan, let’s continue to #ThinkBroad, support partnerships and collaboration, and leverage opportunities to ensure North Broad’s growth is inclusive and impactful.

Thank you,
Shalimar Thomas, Executive Director

North Broad is Connecting Neighborhoods & People

North Broad Street is one of Philadelphia’s most prominent corridors, anchoring adjacent neighborhoods, supporting businesses and community mainstays, and connecting residents to entertainment, retail, and jobs. The North Broad Renaissance (NBR) target area spans from City Hall to Germantown Avenue and touches the eight neighborhoods of Center City East, Center City West, Poplar, Fairmount, North Central, Hartranft, Fairhill, and Allegheny West.

The People

More than 50,000 residents live along the corridor and in its adjacent census tracts. The area’s population is young, with 37 percent of residents between the ages of 20 and 39. The school age population, consisting of residents ages 10 to 19, comprises nearly 20 percent of the population. North Broad is also diverse; 85 percent of residents are black, 23 percent are white, and nearly 10 percent are of Hispanic origin (of any race).

Population is essentially stable from last year, but is expected to grow by one percent annually compared to 0.45 percent annually citywide from 2019 to 2024. Overall, while residents aged 20 to 39 will remain dominant in the area, the corridor will also experience the effects of a rapidly expanding senior citizen population in line with broader trends.
Age and Gender Distribution of North Broad Residents

Educational Attainment
While the percentage of North Broad residents who have completed high school or received their GED is similar to that of the city as a whole, the area has a lower rate of college completion, with 21.1 percent of adults having a Bachelor’s degree or higher compared to 29.3 percent citywide.

Educational Attainment of North Broad Residents

Student Presence
Strong educational and academic medical institutions along the corridor attract a large population of young adults – more than a quarter of the people living in the North Broad census tracts are 20 to 29 years old. While not all of these individuals are students, 25 percent of all residents are currently enrolled in undergraduate or graduate school, compared to 9 percent throughout the city. In addition to a large student population, the corridor also has a strong presence of students commuting from other areas as a result of strong institutions that include Temple University, Temple University Hospital, and Hahnemann University Hospital.

In addition to a large higher education student population, more than 5,000 youth living in North Broad census tracts are enrolled in public and private K-12 institutions, supporting the need for strong educational institutions and youth-oriented services. The corridor is home to the Philadelphia School District building at 440 North Broad Street and North Broad residents have access to a diverse group of public, private, and faith-based K-12 educational institutions.

Income
The 2019 household median income in North Broad Census Tracts is $15,357 compared to $40,129 in the city overall. Nearly half of all North Broad Street households have an income level below $15,000 annually, compared to 23.6 percent citywide. By 2024, North Broad household income is expected to grow by 16 percent, matching anticipated growth in median household incomes citywide.

Household Incomes Along North Broad and Citywide
Living along North Broad

The census tracts along North Broad have a diverse and well-maintained housing stock that accommodates a range of residents’ needs and preferences. A steady increase in home values and the number of sales indicates that the housing market is on the rise. At the same time, rental rates have remained stable over the past year, indicating continued affordability alongside newer, more high-end options.

Of the 16,300 properties within the North Broad census tracts, 54 percent are single-family housing, 15 percent are multi-family housing, six percent are commercial or mixed-use properties, and the remaining 25 percent are other uses, including commercial, industrial, and vacant land. According to the most recent property assessment data available, the average single-family residential property assessed is $118,000, while the average multifamily assessed value is nearly $900,000.

The number of residential transactions in North Broad census tracts increased by more than 20 percent between 2017 and 2018. This increased activity was paired with a nine percent increase in average sales prices, which went from $142,900 in 2017 to more than $156,000 in 2018. Transaction data through April 2019 shows a continuation of this upward trend in property sales values.4

Approximately one in four occupied housing units in the North Broad census tracts are owner occupied. An additional 2,800 units are vacant, representing approximately 14 percent of the area’s 20,250 residential units. This vacancy rate, which is down more than two percent since 2010, is expected to continue to decline over the next five years.3

The single-family housing stock in the North Broad census tracts is generally well-maintained, with nearly 80 percent of properties categorized as having average or above average exterior condition. Approximately ten percent of the area’s single family housing is newly constructed or recently rehabbed, while 11 percent is identified as being below average, sealed or structurally compromised, or vacant.

1 The 2019 data includes all transactions through April 2019. The Philadelphia Housing Index was updated to include a more complete dataset in 2019. Due to this change in methodology, historic transaction averages differ slightly from those reported in the 2018 State of North Broad.3

ESRI Business Analyst

The number of building permits for new construction and major alterations along the corridor has remained steady over time, with increases in 2018 and 2019 after a slight lull in 2017.

Rents along North Broad Street vary significantly across the area from City Hall to Germantown Avenue. The areas along the corridor in close proximity to Center City address increasing and changing demand through the introduction of new, luxury apartments offering a variety of amenities renting for $1,500 to over $2,500.¹

Rent ranges are considerably lower further north on Broad Street, as the type, quality, and age of housing changes. In the Hartranft, Fairhill, and Allegheny West neighborhoods, where housing tends to be older with fewer amenities, rent ranges from as low as $650 a month for one bedrooms in older apartment buildings to up to around $1,400 for three bedrooms in newly constructed ones.

¹ There are relatively few three bedroom units available toward the southern end of North Broad.
Jobs and Businesses along North Broad

More than 15,000 residents of North Broad area census tracts have jobs, including 6 percent of whom are employed locally. The unemployment rate is under 11 percent, down from 14 percent last year. Approximately 1,350 businesses provide more than 30,000 jobs in the North Broad area. The majority of these (nearly 70 percent) are in the Health Care and Education Services sectors, generally characterized as high-skill, high-wage jobs. The largest employers on North Broad Street include Shriners Hospital for Children – Philadelphia, Temple University Hospital, Temple University, and Hahnemann University Hospital. Area residents and commuters benefit from convenient access to the city’s major job centers including Center City, University City, and the Navy Yard. In addition, North Broad Renaissance is focused on expanding existing access to additional employment opportunities in the professional services, health, technology, and arts and culture sectors along and adjacent to North Broad Street.
Why This Matters

By strategically attracting businesses within the employment district, North Broad can become a corridor that provides sustainable employment for the community and students, while also developing the talent that employers’ desire – all in an effort to address Philadelphia’s poverty issue.

Development along North Broad

There is approximately $2.3 billion in assessed property value along North Broad Street between City Hall and Germantown Avenue. Residential properties, which include both single family and multifamily buildings, represent the majority of assessed value in the area, at $1.13 billion. Commercial properties, including office space, restaurants, and retail locations, contribute an additional $1.02 billion.

The North Broad Street corridor continues to experience transformational growth and revitalization. Commercial, residential, and institutional development along the corridor has accelerated in the past year, as regional businesses and institutions have both seized opportunities to adapt historic properties to modern uses and identified spaces for new development. The redevelopment of the Met Philadelphia, the Philadelphia Inquirer Building, and the Beury Building provide examples of innovative repurposing, while 1300 Fairmount Avenue and Mural West represent the emergence of new development. Multiple projects are proposed, a number of projects are under construction, and several projects have been recently completed since 2015.

The State of North Broad 2020

Why This Matters

Strong growth and development activity indicates a thriving corridor and community. The introduction of new commercial, retail, entertainment, recreational, and residential space results in both expanded housing options and access to a growing plurality of stores, employers, entertainment, and recreation. Importantly, the redevelopment of previously vacant and decaying buildings and parcels throughout the corridor positively affects quality of life and property value, while conserving resources and preserving the history and diversity that differentiates North Broad Street from the rest of the city. Overall, development along North Broad is adding innovative and inclusive amenities such as the Reading Viaduct Rail Park, while creating both luxury residential units and some affordable housing options such as Diamond Park and the Project Home development at 2415 North Broad Street.

Businesses also benefit from enhanced access to updated space, proximity to a qualified, diverse workforce, and increased visitor spending driven by the attraction of new businesses, residents, and employers along the corridor. As has been the case throughout the city, the economic revitalization of North Broad Street will ultimately be driven by growth and development.

NBR is committed to ensuring this revitalization is inclusive by engaging all community stakeholders, promoting job growth, and seeking overall improvement of quality of life along North Broad Street. According to the Urban Institute, the work of community oriented, market responsive development organizations like NBR can catalyze investment and ultimately stimulate the economic revitalization of urban neighborhoods, resulting in significant increases in property values and quality of life.

Creative Spaces along North Broad

North Broad Street and its adjacent neighborhoods are rapidly growing and evolving. The NBR is actively working to support growth that is beneficial to current residents and stakeholders and is enticing to all. NBR was recently awarded a grant by the William Penn Foundation to explore the idea of activating creative spaces along North Broad, with a focus on vacant green space. NBR has engaged the community, Econsult Solutions Inc., and AOS Architects to produce a plan aiming to inspire outdoor activation that allows public space to be used in an innovative way, enabling residents and visitors to benefit physically, culturally, and economically.

NBR Districts

Technology & Innovation District
(Zone 1 – N. Broad & Spring Garden)

The Technology and Innovation District located at the intersection of N. Broad Street and Spring Garden Street will help develop this area as a technology hub, attracting related businesses which will enrich the development already scheduled for this area, while engaging the public to take interest in possible careers in technology. To activate the streetscape of this major intersection, AOS proposes to introduce an interactive bus shelter on the north-west corner of N. Broad and illuminating seating on the north-east corner. In addition to a green roof to promote biodiversity in the city, the bus shelter includes interactive touch screens which commuters can use to gain information about their commute and the city, or play select games. The illuminating seating will act as a parklet projecting out into the parking lane of N. Broad Street. Trees lining the sidewalk will give the seating shade and greenery behind the seating will act as a barrier between pedestrians and the street.

Arts & Culture District
(Zone 2 – N. Broad & Fairmount / Ridge)

The intersection of N. Broad and Fairmount/Ridge Avenues is rich in cultural history with its many historic and cultural sites, including the Divine Lorraine and the MET Philadelphia. The interventions for this area will help bring communities together and take advantage of the $4.1 billion economic impact arts and culture has on the region. The interventions include a pop-up street fair / market with a painted streetscape on the small portion of Fairmount Ave. between N. Broad and Ridge Ave., an amphitheater on the triangular island between all three avenues, and fixed seating with greenscape on the south-east corner of the intersection. These three interventions will act as gathering mechanisms for the residents of N. Broad’s diverse neighborhoods while promoting the arts in Philadelphia.

Professional Services District (Zone 3 – N. Broad & Lehigh)

To promote business development along N. Broad Street, the intersection of N. Broad and Lehigh Avenue will host urban place-making interventions that will encourage people to gather and stay rather than go elsewhere. Small scale, green, and pedestrian-friendly interventions will humanize the vast amount of paving that now characterize this intersection, eventually spurring small businesses to set up in the area. These interventions include a modern-style pergola on the south-west corner of the intersection with large planters growing trees to create a green separation between the gas-station and pedestrian seating, an illuminating train station to create a safer and brighter train stop, a green space with fixed seating and food trucks on the north side of the historic North Broad Street Station building, and a jogging path to promote more pedestrian activity.

Health District (Zone 4 – N. Broad & Germantown)

The health district at the corner of N. Broad and Germantown Avenue will bring health and health education outdoors in order to fight the health crisis in the 19140 ZIP code and create a healthy environment for residents. The interventions include a tranquil park with rotating health services and farmers’ markets in pop-up tents and a neighborhood history mural, a jogging path, and a redesign of the triangular island at the intersection of Germantown Ave and N. Broad which includes seating with greenscape and an interactive green bus shelter. These interventions will encourage residents and other users of this intersection to spend more time outside, supporting their efforts to become healthy employees and find sustainable employment.

Transportation along North Broad

North Broad Street plays an important role as a transportation hub and connector in a region with world class transit, pedestrian, and bike infrastructure, offering multiple transit options to commuters, residents, and businesses. The North Broad corridor connects several pedestrian, bike, and transit friendly neighborhoods between City Hall and Germantown Avenue, all of which boast significantly high walk scores. Directly on the corridor, the walk score of the North Broad Street area is identified as a “walker’s paradise.” High walk and bike scores indicate a more vibrant, healthy, accessible and environmentally friendly neighborhood. Overall, the improvement of walkability and bikeability increases the quality of life, as well as property values.

Walk, Bike, Transit Scores

In addition, North Broad Street is a major roadway, connecting North and South Philadelphia and intersecting with major highways including Interstate 676 and Route 1. Along the corridor between City Hall and Germantown Avenue, annual average daily traffic volume generally totals over 30,000 vehicles per day. Intersections at Broad and W Glenwood Ave is particularly high traffic areas, averaging close to 38,000 cars daily.

Why This Matters

The NBR Creative Activation Plan will help support inclusive growth. There is an opportunity to utilize the vacant spaces along the corridor in temporary or permanent ways that benefit the community. These spaces will not only create aesthetic and cultural values to the local community, but also a significant volume of economic activity, which enhances the local tourism and recreation industries. In addition, the local real estate market will likely benefit from these creative spaces, which help to increase nearby property values. The presence of creative public spaces attracts and increases visitor spending from outside of the area, which accrues across a number of sectors and then circulates throughout the local economy.
Transit Options
Residents, commuters, and visitors benefit from a variety of public transportation options along the North Broad Street corridor. There are eight SEPTA subway stations located in the North Broad Renaissance target area including: Race-Vine, Spring Garden, Fairmount, Girard, Cecil B. Moore, Susquehanna-Dauphin, North Philadelphia, Alleghany, and Erie. The SEPTA Broad Street Subway Line has the second highest daily average ridership in 2018 at 112,000 passengers and offers 24 hour weekend service to its customers.13

In addition to subway service, SEPTA offers expansive bus service, enabling residents and patrons of the North Broad Street to travel throughout the city.

Transit Facilitating Tourism
Public transportation plays a critical role in the city’s ability to successfully host large events attracting both local and international visitors and attention. The Broad Street Line connects the Philadelphia Convention Center with the corridor, promoting visitation and tourism on North Broad.

On August 3, 2019, the 2019 Philly Free Streets event proved to attract Philadelphians from neighborhoods across the city, and beyond. The City partnered with community groups and stakeholders to open an 8-mile car-free stretch between City Hall and Butler Street, just north of Erie Avenue, and invite people to walk, bike, and play. At the event, Philly Free Streets volunteers conducted 561 participant surveys. Fifty-eight percent (58%) of people surveyed reported that they had participated in Philly Free Streets in one or more of the three prior year’s programs. 42 out of 48 Philadelphia zip codes were reported as home zip codes of people surveyed.

Not only did the successful event encourage thousands of residents and visitors to discover the great history, institutions, and businesses along North Broad Street, it also created a number of temporary jobs during the event. Philly Free Streets, in partnership with SERVE, the City of Philadelphia’s Office of Civic Engagement & Volunteer Service, welcomed a record 140 volunteers who, together, volunteered 490 total service hours. In partnership with North Broad Renaissance, the City connected seven North Philadelphia residents to part-time summer employment at $15/hour.

The State of North Broad 2020

Why This Matters

The demand for improving and expanding transit services in North Broad area is high because public transit is the primary mode of transportation for residents, students, commuters and visitors to access school, job centers, and nearby tourist attractions. Improving public transit services plays an important role in providing access to job opportunities, reducing pollution, reducing congestion, encouraging job growth, promoting tourism, and creating positive neighborhood economic impacts.

Public Safety along North Broad

Although North Broad Street is recognized as a “walker’s paradise” and overall transportation hub, public safety is often cited as a significant concern in the North Philadelphia region. However, North Broad Street was cited as one of the quieter corridors by local police officials. The number of crimes along North Broad Street declined by 12.0 percent from 2015 to 2018, indicating a larger decrease comparing to the city’s decline of 11.6 percent.

Of all crimes with a North Broad Street address committed in 2019, the most common crime incidents are categorized as thefts, other offenses, other assaults, fraud, and narcotic and drug law violations. The three most common offenses, representing around 50 percent of all crimes occurring along North Broad Street, are considered non-violent offenses.

1 2019 crime data is not recorded for full year; only partially through November 2019 when the analysis was completed.

3 The city separates crime into two categories. Part I crimes include homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, and thefts. Part II crimes include simple assault, prostitution, gambling, fraud, and other non-violent offenses.
North Broad Street is an attractive corridor and a diverse, prominent cultural center. NBR is focused on enhancing cleanliness and safety on the corridor, and improving landscaping and maintenance, which are all fundamental for spurring economic development.

Quality of Life along North Broad

The City of Philadelphia has experienced a general decline in major crimes in recent years; however, public safety continues to be a significant concern for residents, visitors, and business owners. High crime levels lead to low housing prices, low neighborhood satisfaction, less local involvement, and increasing desire to leave the neighborhood. It is crucial to provide a safe living environment to the residents in the areas, including the large student population.

NBR recently conducted a survey to understand the safety concerns of the community and to work towards making North Broad feel safer. Feedback included:

- 64 percent of those who took the survey feel safe walking down North Broad during the daytime
- 28 percent of the respondents feel safe walking down North Broad during the nighttime
- More than 60 percent of respondents indicated that adding more security cameras and street lights would help improve the atmosphere of safety
- Other trending ideas included adding more police patrol by bike and foot, supporting activity that creates more foot traffic, hosting more community events and programs to bring the neighborhood together, and supporting non-profit community organizations and small businesses to improve their sidewalks and facades to create a safer environment.

Why This Matters

The Philadelphia Litter Index is a metric to compare the relative cleanliness of different areas and neighborhoods through the city. The litter index scale ranges from 1-4, with 1 being the “minimal litter” and 4 representing an area that is “extremely littered.” According to the NBR, the area along North Broad has an average litter index of 3.45, above the city average of 1.7. This has improved by one point over the last two years, with a particular decrease in paper, cans and plastic bottles.

Because of their successful litter efforts, the NBR has received multiple awards and recognitions. In 2019, NBR was recognized as a Civic Superhero earning a grant from Keep Philadelphia Beautiful and it was also featured in the City’s “Don’t Waste This Idea” newsletter as a best practice to emulate. Furthermore, the owner of NBR’s cleaning vendor has helped to inspire Councilwoman Cherelle Parker’s $10 million PHL Taking Care of Business initiative which is focused on reducing blight and litter on 10 commercial corridors through the city.

Vision Zero Safety Improvements

The North Broad corridor is considered a Vision Zero High Injury Network street, meaning that it has a high number of driver and pedestrian accidents and more serious crashes than other Philadelphia streets. PennDOT in partnership with the City of Philadelphia is focused on traffic safety and is working towards the City’s Vision Zero goal of zero traffic deaths by 2030. In September of 2019, hardened centerlines were installed in the center of North Broad Street to help slow driver’s turning speeds, prevent illegal U-turns, and improve safety for pedestrians and cars alike.

Landscaping and Beautification

In addition, NBR continues to support greening efforts along North Broad Street. The organization is responsible for maintaining 61 planters along North Broad Street. In 2018, NBR launched the Broader Green Initiative in North Philadelphia that will train and hire residents from the North Broad community to help maintain the planters all with the goal of improving the overall economic vitality in one of Philadelphia’s poorest communities. The program has provided eight to ten seasonal jobs over the last two years.

Along the North Broad corridor there is one unmistakable icon that helps to identify the place – the North Poles. In 2016, the Philadelphia’s Departments of Streets and Commerce invested $12 million to install 41 steel street light masts along the N. Broad corridor. The ‘North Poles’ now serve as a public art that light up the Broad Street median from Hamilton Street to Glenwood Avenue. They include LED lighting that attracts attention and provides a sense of place along North Broad Street, supporting worthy causes and organizations.

Why This Matters

Clean and beautiful streets are key building blocks to making a great place. Efforts to keep streets safe, clean, and attractive add to the quality of life for residents and visitors alike. Specifically, they help to create interaction and activity on the streets, support healthy lifestyles, and encourage customers to frequent local businesses. In addition, cleaning and beautification efforts that encourage local employment further add to the civic engagement and economic vitality of an area.
Take Advantage of Opportunity Zones Along North Broad Street

In 2017, the federal government created Opportunity Zones—tax incentives designed to encourage investment in economically distressed communities. There are several tax benefits for investors who invest their unrealized capital gains in Qualified Opportunity Funds, which may result in significant interest and investment in the North Broad community.

There are 14 Opportunity Zones situated along North Broad on valuable real estate in the heart of Philadelphia. Several private entities are seeking partners to complete Opportunity Zone projects along North Broad. In addition, the City of Philadelphia has designated two areas along North Broad as priorities for Opportunity Zone development.

1) North Philadelphia Station: City goals for the area include bringing investment and jobs centered around transit amenities of the station, adaptive reuse that focuses on living-wage jobs, and preventing displacement of longtime residents.

2) Broad, Germantown, and Erie: City goals include supporting the commercial corridor, creating jobs for existing residents, increasing pedestrian safety, creating public spaces, and maintaining affordable housing units.

With recent development, strong anchors, renewed energy, and Opportunity Zone tax benefits, we look forward to seeing the realization of transformative redevelopment along North Broad Street.

A Proposed Business Improvement District

In May 2019, the North Broad Renaissance formed a Steering Committee to develop plans for a proposed Business Improvement District (BID) to support commercial properties along North Broad. Four steering committee meetings between May and September 2019 have been held to gather input from stakeholders about the types of services that would be most helpful within the service area, which is proposed to include commercial properties extending from Lehigh Avenue to the south to Sedgley Avenue to the north.

Business Improvement Districts, which are funded through a special assessment paid by commercial property owners, typically offer services like street cleaning, branding, and increased lighting within their boundaries. These services, which are provided in addition to, not in the place of, city services, support existing businesses, encourage new businesses to establish themselves in the area, and improve the visitor and resident experience through improved cleanliness and safety.

A community needs survey has offered insight on participants’ favorite aspects of North Broad Street, opinions on existing conditions, and priorities for future investment, including potential beautification efforts, cleaning services, capital improvements, and quality of life services.

Positioned for Growth

North Broad Street is at the convergence of opportunity and positive economic forces. The corridor continues to experience transformational growth and revitalization with residential, institutional, and commercial development occurring in all directions. As a result, the state of North Broad is strong and well positioned for revitalization that benefits current and future residents, businesses and visitors. The North Broad corridor boasts many positive attributes including:

- Forecasted population growth
- Active housing market
- Growing demand for entertainment and commercial uses
- Federal Opportunity Zones
- Plans for adding creative spaces along the corridor
- Strong transportation network
- Decreasing crime occurrence and perception
- Engaged community working to improve cleanliness, maintenance, and landscaping
